ABSTRACT

The research on taboo words in Devayan has not been conducted yet, and thus, this study investigated the taboo words in Devayan society. This research was a descriptive qualitative study. The technique used was in-depth interview by digging much information from informants about taboo words in the language. The data in this study were analyzed by using Miles and Huberman’s framework (1984), namely data reduction, data display, and conclusion: drawing/verification. The results of this study were (1) taboo words related to sex, (2) taboo words related to the natural function of the human body, (3) taboo words related to the sexual activity, (4) taboo words related to misconduct, (5) taboo words related to deficiency, and (6) taboo words related to animals.

Keywords: Taboo language, Devayan, Simeulu.

INTRODUCTION

Devayan constitutes one of the three tribes in Simeulu, a regency in Aceh, located 150 km off the west coast of Sumatra. Besides Devayan, the other two tribes are Sigulai and Leukon. As Muslims, Devayan people are very welcome and friendly for other people. Moreover, they work at various sectors; some of them make a living by being fishermen, gardeners or farmers, while others are civil servants (Pegawai Negeri Sipil).

In speaking, they are very careful to convey their intentions to others to avoid offense. Therefore, they pay close attention to the words spoken when speaking. However, Devayan people are rather concerned with the taboo words used for speech acts of prohibition or abstinence. This appears to be due to the culture they have inherited from generation to generation.

It can also be seen from the elders’ habit in the area who often use very subtle words in various traditional events. As the words exist in the customary marriage procession, the customary elders or the authorized parties provide guidance to the bride. They will advise or provide guidance in the style of language and unusual forms of speech. In a sense, the words are more than words that have subtle meanings and speeches or sayings that sound polite. Likewise in welcoming guests for friendship (melawat), Devayan people usually give greetings in the form of verses that sound like poems which are spoken in polite and meaningful words. However, today, it is not used anymore by young generation. This is due to their lack of interest in preserving culture and also influenced by other dominant languages used, such as Indonesian and Jame language, a local language in Šimeulu. In fact, some teenagers assume that people who cannot speak Jame language are considered plebeian.

In Devayan culture, taboo words can demean people who are subjected to these words. In the other words, people who are associated with the taboo word will feel embarrassed or offended and are considered bad by the surrounding community. In addition, they will also be exposed to a disgrace badly seen by others if the taboo words used violate ethics or norms within the community or religion. Thus, there are a number of taboo words for the Devayan communities which need to be avoided. However, there are a number of taboo words that are considered to be harsh words and can only be said at certain times and conditions.

However, prohibited words or taboo words spoken in the Devayan community are still preserved by the elders in the area, although many young generations do not care about it anymore. Thus, the researchers intend to investigate taboo words in Devayan.

LITERATURE REVIEW

Taboo words are seen as words that should not be said because they can cause bad things for those who say them because they are considered either unethical or immoral.

The taboo words were first introduced by Captain James Cook. It was found on his third trip logbook to Tahiti in June 1777. The taboo word is taken from the Tongan language “tabu”. After that, the term was written in English (taboo) by him in July of the same year (see Allan and Burridge, 2006).

According to Richards and Schmidt (2010, p. 582), taboo is words or expressions that are considered offensive or embarrassing so that their usages are discouraged in public space. In addition, taboo words are advised not to be used because they relate to behavior which will cause others to be anxious and embarrassed (see Trudgill, 2000; Wardhaugh, 2006). Behavior is an important thing in social life since when people misbehave, they will no longer get respect from others. Moreover, someone’s value and ethics can be represented from the taboo words he or she uses. It means that someone who often uses them can potentially lose dignity.

Battistella (2005, p. 72) mentions that taboo words are can be categorized into epithets, profanity, vulgarity, and obscenity. Epithet is a speech in the form of slurs like wop, raghead, bitch, or fag. In addition, this epithet can be in the form of words aimed at race, ethnicity, gender, sexuality, appearance, disabilities, or other characteristics. Furthermore, profanity refers to religious cursing as hell, damn or goddamn, while vulgarity and obscenity refer to sex anatomy or sexual excretory functions, such as shit and fuck.

Taboo words in every society are different from other societies. Trudgill (2000, p. 19) says “In English, taboo words can be words related to sex and religion.” In contrast to what Trudgill said above, in the district of South Aceh, there are more various taboo words related to several things. These taboo words can relate to the names of disease, animal, and season (Yuliasari, 2016). Differently, taboo words in Teunom, Aceh Jaya can be realized in addressing others such as addressing the parents with ‘du’ and ‘ma, elder relatives by “kah”, the person who died with “mate”, animals with buya, rimung, and elephant, the God with “si Tuhan”.

Taboo words are also related to sex such as “bohkreh” (males’ genital), aneuktet (female’s breasts), pik/pukoe (females’ vagina), sexual activity “kochokboh” (masturbation), sexual profession “lonte” (bitch); and government wisdom “gasin, kepeucat” (see Mutia, 2017).

In addition, another study regarding these taboo words in the Gayo community in Bener Meriah Regency was conducted by Yani (2019). She found the words can be tabooed when someone use certain words with a name for example, Reje Kampung, Banta, Ine, Ama, Inen Mayak, Aman Mayak and Perasen. Moreover, taboo words can also occur when one calls a name of animals such as, kule, gajah, tikus and asu. Furthermore, taboo words can happen when someone refers to certain parts of the body such as, otoh, tenek or etet, and kesut. Mentioning the names of diseases such as bodok, supak, tongkek, and busung can also be considered taboo. Besides, taboo words can also be realized by saying profanity or swearing such as demalah, benatang, kafir, jalang, pekak. Other certain words such as sotot, mutube, nik, micing and berniet are also regarded as taboo words.

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

This study employed qualitative approach. This method is used to find taboo words in the community of Devayan, Simeulu regency, Aceh province. The data were collected by means of in-depth interview. This technique is appropriate with the research since it is able to gain data in the natural setting (Sugiyono, 2015).

This research was conducted in several villages in Teupah Barat sub-district in Simeulu district. The study was undertaken in this sub-district because the native Devayan speakers who had not been affected by other languages were still found in this area. Therefore, it can maintain the authenticity of the data collected. Informants in this study were 3 (three) Devayan residents in Teupah Barat sub-district who had daily jobs as farmers and fishermen. Two informants were men, while the other was a woman who know taboo words in Devayan society well.

The data was analyzed by using Miles and Huberman’s framework (1984). The stages are data reduction, data display, and conclusion: drawing/verification. Sugiyono (2015) explains these three techniques. Data reduction means summarizing the initial data obtained by selecting or searching for data that is presented in brief descriptions, whereas data display presents the data that has been reduced to the appropriate narrative arrangement to make it easier for researchers to understand it. Meanwhile, the conclusion: drawing/verification is the finding or data that has been obtained and described in the form of narrative.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

The findings of this study shows some taboo words related to sex, natural functions of the human body, sexual activity, misconduct, deficiency and certain names of animals. In the following, each of these taboo words will be elaborated in detail.
1) Taboo Words Related to Sex

   a. Kolop [kolop], sisit [sisit], butu [butu], and boekboek [bɔɛʔbɔɛʔ]

   These words refer to the males’ genitals. These words are strictly prohibited from being spoken by Devayan people in any situations because they sound harsh. Thus, if someone is forced to say it, he or she should replace it with a more polite word, namely efe [əfə]. The word efe is a very polite word spoken when saying one of the names for the male sex. It means “shy”.

   b. Tiek [tieʔ] or toyo [tɔyo]

   Tiek or toyo are females’ genital. Both words have the same meaning, and thus it is strictly forbidden to say. The Devayan community also replaces it with the word efe as it is said when referring to the male genitals as above.

   c. Otok tai [otoʔ tai]

   The word otok tai means “anus” which is forbidden to say because it is considered impolite. This word is strictly prohibited from being spoken in front of the older people or in front of a crowded audience. Therefore, the Devayan community replaced the word otok tai with a more polite word, that is lamang [laman]. However, the word otok tai is considered normal when used to speak with people of the same age.

2. Taboo Words Related to the Natural Function of the Human Body

   a. Afeselan [afeselan]

   The word afeselan, meaning ‘full’ is a taboo word to refer to a pregnant woman because it violates the norms of modesty. This word can only be said to denote a pregnant animal. The Devayan community gives a subtle word to refer to a pregnant woman with ekawak [ɛʔawaʔ]. The word ekawak itself is taken from the words ek and awak. The ek means 'in' while awak means 'trunk or body' which means in the body there is a baby.

   b. Mangiap [maɲiap]

   This word is forbidden to say in the public because it is considered rude by the Devayan community. The word mangiap means ‘menstruation’. Because this word is considered too vulgar to be pronounced, it is replaced with other words, namely mangirambawa [maɲirambawa]. The words mangirambawa has a different meaning from the original word, namely mangiram “to see” and bawa “moon”. It means that the people of Devayan denominate a menstrual woman with “she sees the moon”.

3. Taboo Words Related to the Sexual Activity

a. Kokok [kokoʔ] and rakan [rakan]
The word kokok is a much prohibited word to be spoken by the Devayan community. This word is not allowed to be heard by other people. The word kokok is defined as sexual activity carried out by married couples. In English this word means "coitus". In the language of Devayan this word is divided into active and passive verbs. The active verb is bekokok [bəkokoʔ] "copulate" and the passive verb is dikokok[dikokoʔ] "copulated”. Whereas rakan was taken or borrowed from the Acehnese language and it has the same meaning as kokok. Therefore, these words are replaced with words that are considered polite by the local community, namely mangalanak[maŋalanakaʔ] (n/v) / mangalanaki[maŋalanakiʔi] (av) / dialanaki[dialanakiʔi] (pv).

b. Mallos [mallɔs]
The word mallos is prohibited from being spoken in public because it is a very despicable word. The word mallos is a word that signifies a sexual intercourse carried out by a man and a woman who is not a married couple. Obviously this act violated the rules of religion and local customs. Thus, people who are caught committing such acts will certainly be subject to qanun penalties in the form of caning and they will definitely be considered very despicable by the local community. Hence, since outside-marriage sexual intercourse is very bad and despicable, saying this word is also prohibited. Therefore, this word is replaced with a smooth and polite word, which is mahaomahao[mahaomahaoʔ]. It is taken from the basic word mahaol"bad" because it is a bad deed.

c. Mansingel [mansingəl]
This word is a speech that is forbidden to be spoken by Devayan people because it is considered a dirty word. The word mansingel is a word that signifies sexual activity carried out by animals. In English, the word mansingel means "mate". Therefore, the utter of this word in public is considered to violate the ethics of public manners. Because this is seen very seriously by the surrounding community, the use of the word is disguised by replacing it with another word. Words that are substitutes for the word are deemed more polite to use if forced to say, namely malalatae [malalatae]. With this word, people who say the word would not be subject to violations of manners. Therefore, these words are sometimes often used as introductory words in discussions about livestock or so on.

4. Taboo Words Related to Misconduct
   a. Mammod[mamməd]
      Mammod refers to an act of theft. The meaning of this word is "stealing". This word is forbidden to be spoken in front of the public among Devayan people because it is considered rude. In addition, the use of this word in front of the family members of the thief can make them extremely shameful. Therefore, to keep this from happening, the word mammod is prohibited from being spoken in public. Otherwise, when used, it must be replaced with a more subtle word, namely maheahaok [maheahaɔʔ]. The word mahea means "fast" and haok means "hand".

   b. Manehenehe[manəhehe]
      This word is considered to be a rough word because it refers to actions that are not good. The word manehenehe means 'peek' which is considered as a negative meaning. Because this word is not appropriate to say, therefore, the people of Devayan choose another word that is considered subtle, namely maneteleo [manətəleo] which has the same meaning with manehenehe, but it is used in general or positive context to sound polite.

   c. Mangasong[maŋasɔŋ]
      In everyday life, sometimes Devayan people often see some embarrassing events, such as fights in a family or among neighbors and so on. Usually this fight can occur because there is a third party who slanders them. Thus, it causes the bickering. The misdeed of third parties who spread hatred towards people is signified by the word mangasong. However, this word should not be arbitrarily spoken in public. If this word is publicly used in a sentence "diamangasongmerekauntukberkelahi" (he slanders them to fight), the person who does mangasong will be hated by everyone. Thus, this word is prohibited from being spoken in public except by village elders who can judge cases that occur, but they still avoid using this word by
d. Mangakkali[maŋaʔkali]

The word mangakkali is also a harsh word because it is understood to be ‘cheat’. Devayan people, who are very strict with politeness norms, are very careful in choosing words, although it is to express action that is not good. Thus, they replace ‘Mangakali’ with another more subtle word, namely manghelot[maŋhelot] derived from helot. The words mangakkali and manghelot actually have the same meanings, namely ‘cheat’, yet the latter sounds more subtle.

5. Taboo Words Related to Deficiency

a. Pakak[pakaʔ]

The pronunciation of the word pakak is prohibited among the Devayan Society because the word sounds harsh and against the modesty custom. The word pakak means "deaf". Thus, this word should not be used to refer to a deaf person. Apart from being able to offend others, saying the word to others means insulting them. Therefore, this word cannot be used, yet should instead be replaced with another word, namely menggel[menggəl]. This word has the same meaning with pakak, but for Devayan people, this word sounds more subtle.

b. Afuta[afuta]

This word is the same as the word pakak above, which is a deficiency that others have. The word afuta means "blind". Just like the word pakak, this word is prohibited from being spoken in a public because it can make others feel offended. By saying this word, it means insulting others with their shortcomings. Thus, this word is replaced with a more polite word, namely afetek[afetɛk].

6. Taboo Words Related to Animals

a. Boya[bɔya]

Boya in English is a crocodile which is an animal feared by the Devayan community. In Devayan public belief, mentioning the word boya is considered taboo by the Devayan community. This word is prohibited from being said by people who are work in the riverbank or forest because these animals can bring disaster or misfortune. Boya in Devayan community can be replaced with the word nenek[ɲɛnɛʔ]’grandmother’. Therefore, by changing the name, the person who uses it is not overwritten by misfortune.

b. Sawa[sawa]

Sawa is the name of another animal that cannot be spoken carelessly by the Devayan community. Sawa in English is a snake. Just like the word boya, the word sawa should not be said carelessly especially for people who work in the mountain. They believe that if it is said, a snake will come and pounce on the person who calls his name. By the Devayan community, the word sawawas replaced with the word ollor[ɔllɔr] ‘root’.

CONCLUSION

Based on the data regarding taboo words in Devayan language, it can be concluded that there are 6 groups of taboo words in this language. As noted above, the taboo words in Devayan can be classified into (1) taboo words related to sex (kolop, sisit, butu, and boekboek, tiek or toyo, and otek tai), (2) taboo words related to the natural function of the human body (afeselan and mangiap), (3) taboo words related to the sexual activity (kokok and rakan (Acehnese)), mallos, and mansingel, (4) taboo words related to misconduct (mammod, manehenehe, mangasong, and mangakkali), (5) taboo words related to deficiency (pakak and afuta), and (6) taboo words related to animals (boya and sawa).
